CITY CLERK
HONOLULU, HAWAII

Subject: City Council Meeting Speaker Registration

Bill 10 is a positive movement for the state in both the environment, but also the economy. Not producing plastic bags and shipping them in saves a lot of money, as well as not having to pay for clean up crews and facilities to have to deal with the plastics, saving even more money, as well as saving the environment. Many protected species, the Green Sea Turtle, the Laysan Albatross and the Hawaiian Monk Seal, are threatened by plastics in the habitat, so this could potentially save the species. Also, it takes the state a lot of imported oil to produce and maintain plastics production, so to ban such productions would enable the state to lessen the importation of the oil, and save the state a large sum of money. Taking out plastic bags out of the equation of continued governmental spending would free up a large hole in the budget, save many marine species that rely on the islands for food and shelter and equate to increased environmental stability and economic freedom.
